Adrienne Quinn is vice president of the Enterprise Policy team, which develops and advocates for policies that are beneficial to community-based revitalization; and which works with Congress, the administration, other national organizations and select state and local governments. Adrienne works closely with the public policy and corporate affairs senior executive to implement legislative strategies and proposals, and to develop testimony, regulatory comments and other policy-related materials. As the primary point of contact for key congressional and administration staff, Adrienne educates them broadly about Enterprise's activities, advocating for top affordable housing and community development legislation, identifying appropriations priorities and serving as a resource for objective, nonpartisan information.

Prior to joining Enterprise in 2010, Adrienne served as director of the Seattle Office of Housing. There, she developed housing policy initiatives for the mayor and city council, and managed programs that included: multifamily lending, first-time homebuyer programs; asset management; green affordable housing initiatives; weatherization programs; and tax abatement and incentive programs to encourage for-profit developers to invest in and develop affordable housing. During her five-year tenure as director, the office was responsible for the creation and preservation of more than 3,700 affordable homes and passing a $145 million housing levy, as well as expanding both the Multifamily Tax Exemption Program and the incentive zoning program citywide. Prior to her position with the city of Seattle, she was a partner with Buck & Gordon, LLP, where she provided counsel to for-profit and nonprofit housing developers and municipalities on a range of issues related to real estate development, including affordable housing development.

Adrienne holds a bachelor's degree from College of the Holy Cross, a master's degree in divinity from Harvard University Divinity School and a J.D. from Seattle University School of Law. Adrienne is a former board president for Plymouth Housing Group, a nonprofit focused on housing for formerly homeless individuals; a Seattle Planning Commissioner; and a mentor to teenagers through the YWCA's Girls First Program.
